

Chris Facque

A native Nevadan, Chris Facque graduated with a degree in Political Science at the University of Nevada, Reno (UNR) in 2005. While attending UNR, he worked as a water right title researcher for a water right broker, working in Washoe, Lyon and Churchill Counties.

In 2005 Chris began working for Tri State Surveying, Ltd., increasing the depth of his knowledge while working on several Nevada water rights projects. Chris is proficient in drafting water rights maps, and is a Certified Survey Technician through the National Society of Professional Surveyors. Chris has performed water right title reviews in all Nevada county recorders offices. In addition to County offices, Chris has experience working and other agencies, including the Nevada Division of Water Resources, Truckee Carson Irrigation District, Walker River Irrigation District, and California Water Resources Control Board.

Chris's career has been built on the planning and maintenance of water right projects, and assuming responsibility of these projects from start to finish. Chris has provided the necessary support and services to assist the various State, County and City agencies to ensure project completion. Chris specializes in comprehensive water right research, including property research to determine the resources available and water right title research to confirm the ownership of those resources. Once these resources have been identified, he provides planning and strategies to meet the client's needs within the rules and regulations of the Nevada Division of Water Resources and the State and County Statutes. Chris has provided water rights consulting services for over ten years.
